Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I am completely overwhelmed with joy and gratitude at the magnificent vote I received for the high office of Secretary of State. I want to thank each and every one who participated in securing my nomination and assure them that they will always have a warm spot in my heart. The Secretary of State's office will belong to them, and whenever they are in Raleigh, I want them to come in to see me and afford me the opportunity of rendering to them every possible courtesy and service. The warmest possible welcome will await you.

It is impossible, of course, to write to each and every one, so please give this letter space in your good paper which has been so friendly to me in my campaign.

With heartfelt appreciation and thanks, I am

Sincerely,
Thad Eure.

Know Your Language

THE combination "equally as" frequently crops up in present-day writing and conversation. It is never good English. Do not say, "Their suggestion seems equally as good as yours." Say, "Their suggestion seems as good as yours", or "Their suggestion and yours seem equally good."

Our word "supercilious," meaning haughtily contemptuous or disdainful, comes down to us from "superciliosus," a Latin word meaning, literally, "eyebrowish." The Romans recognized that raising the eyebrows was a characteristic habit of the haughty, arrogant man; so they combined their words "super" (over) and "cilium" (eyebrow) to form "supercilium," meaning "pride," and "superciliosus," meaning "haughty" or "arrogant."
