MARGARET LINDSAY AND PAT O'BRIEN TOGETHER AGAIN IN NEW PICTURE

"Public Enemy's Wife"
First of Week
at Imperial

PAT O'BRIEN is teamed with Margaret Lindsay, and supported by a strong cast, mostly reminiscent of the gangster opus era in the fast-moving comedy drama, "Public Enemy's Wife," scheduled for showing next Monday-Tuesday at the Imperial.

Margaret Lindsay, playing the title role, is freed from a penitentiary after serving a sentence for a crime which implicated Cesar Romero, her husband. Pat O'Brien, a Government agent who is anxious to link Romero with other crimes, trails the released wife. Miss Lindsay, divorced, goes to Palm Beach and is about to wed Dick Foran when Romero breaks from jail. Thinking Romero will try to stop the wedding, O'Brien substitutes for the bridegroom at the ceremony and is unintentionally married when Romero is scared away. Romero snatches the bride from her honeymoon. As Romero is about to make his getaway to Cuba, O'Brien's Government men close in, the crooks are killed and O'Brien and Miss Lindsay agree to let the marriage stand.

The supporting cast includes Robert Armstrong and Joseph King on the right side of the law, and Richard Purcell as Romero's aide.

"TOO MANY PARENTS," a story of youngsters left homeless by the domestic squabbles and bickering of their parents will be the Wednesday-only, "bargain day" attraction on next week's Imperial program. The cast, containing many juvenile stars, is headed by Frances Farmer, Lester Matthews, Porter Hall, Henry Travers, Geo. Ernest, Douglas Scott, Buster Phelps, Sherwood Bailey and Billy Lee.

GENE RAYMOND is seen as an old-fashioned hubby who does not wish his wife, the beautiful Barbara Stanwyck, to work in the picture "The Bride Walks Out," which will have its showing next Thursday and Friday at the Imperial.

Gene is one of those gentlemen who are full of family pride, and who wouldn't think of their wives going out to work. He earns only $35 a week as a surveyor, it is true, but he fully believes that sum, plus his love, should make his pretty wife quite contented. Not only that but Barbara had given up a $50-a-week job as a model to marry Gene.

Gene is a very petulant, impulsive fellow. He begins his wedding bliss by actually going to jail. He socks a policeman in the jaw before he has even gotten away from the municipal chapel at the City Hall. In the hoose-gow he meets a pleasant but spiffed playboy, whose role is taken by Robert Young. Young is under lock and key in the bastille for picketing a night club because the poor chorines "didn't have a rag to their backs," or some highly philanthropic reason like that.

Their acquaintance progresses, and Young is so fond of the two that he wants to marry Miss Stanwyck after he finds the two are unhappy. Things keep getting hotter and hotter, but it's when Barbara goes back to work to help pay back some of the mountains of bills that Gene really begins to snort.

Naturally Barbara becomes tired of all this turmoil, especially when millionaire Robert Young is standing around hopefully tossing a wedding ring before her eyes. Just when Barbara is about to give in, she discovers that her husband is
